City wins Friends of Lansdowne court case

► Judge finds city council didn't act in bad faith ► Rival developer says it will proceed with separate court challenge

The city has beaten a court challenge to its sole-sourced Lansdowne Park re-development deal. Justice Charles Hackland ruled against the community group Friends of Lansdowne's challenge on each of their three arguments and dismissed their application to quash city bylaws relating to the deal with Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group (OSEG).

"We look forward to working with the community to revitalize Lansdowne into a vibrant and dynamic place that residents from across the city can enjoy and be proud of," said Mayor Jim Watson in a statement released yesterday.

The news was a blow for the group that has been fighting the city over Lansdowne Park for years.

"It is a strong validation of our partnership with the city and the support we received from city council. We are now looking ahead to the implementation and construction phase of this exciting development,"

ROGER GREENBERG, ON BEHALF OF OSEG

"We're disappointed," said Friends of Lansdowne spokesperson Ian Lee, soon after he heard the news. As of yesterday evening, the group hadn't met yet and hadn't made a firm decision on whether or not they will launch an appeal, he said.

Claims

The Friends of Lansdowne made three claims against the city:

- The city acted in "bad faith."
- The city acted improperly by procuring a sole-sourced deal with Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group (OSEG).
- The city "illegally bonused" OSEG by offering nominal rents for land.

Speaking for himself, Lee said he hopes they will.

"Does Ian Lee want to appeal? Yes. Does the Friends of Lansdowne want to appeal? We don't know yet," he said.

Passersby come to woman's aid in car fire

Two civilians are being lauded for their quick actions in rescuing a woman from a burning car Thursday morning.

Ottawa Fire Services says it received a call for a vehicle collision on Dalhousie Street at St. Andrew Street, between a Mazda passenger car and a Pontiac.

A statement issued by the service's spokesman, Marc Messier, said three small fires had ignited under the Pontiac following the collision.

Before firefighters arrived at the scene, passerby Paul Pilotte of Gatineau pulled the woman through the window of the driver's door and took her to safety.

Meanwhile, Ottawa

Michelle White noticed the fire as she was driving by. She pulled over, ran into a shop to get an extinguisher and started putting the fires out with Pilotte helping.

When crews arrived the fires were out, Messier said.

The victim was taken to hospital. There were no other injuries.

► Ottawa firefighters say a passerby had to pull the female driver of this car to safety when the vehicle caught fire.

Cellblock video made public

► Police lawyer says concerns over release of footage related to process, not protection of force's image

Members of the public can judge for themselves whether police treated Roxanne Carr appropriately when she was arrested, detained in a cellblock, had her arms bound behind her back, strip-searched and allegedly left without clothes for an hour in 2008.

There are no blows thrown by police or special constables in a controversial cellblock video released Thursday by an Ontario court justice, but Carr's lawyers disputed police assertions the video exonerates officers of allegations of police brutality.

Carr was arrested and charged with assaulting police, obstructing police and damaging property in 2008. Police were called to her apartment following a dispute between Carr and her landlord.

Her charges were dropped in April after her defence lawyer, Mark Ertel, showed the video to Crown attorney Robert Wadden.

"A very experienced Crown attorney looked at that video and withdrew these charges. The reason they were withdrawn was because it was obvious to him when he looked at her treatment in the cellblock that no judge would ever convict her of the petty offences that she was charged with, and that the treatment she received was inappropriate," said Ertel.

He said with the release of the video, the public can now make up their own mind.

A source familiar with the case said the video was only one factor in the Crown's decision, and that the minimal nature of the charges against Carr were disproportionate to her treatment in detention.

Carr is suing the police. Her claims have not been proven in court.

SEAN MCKIBBON/WITH FILES FROM THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Ottawa police hold Roxanne Carr is this image taken from video.

Clip by clip

Roxanne Carr's detention video is broken up into 26 soundless clips showing several different angles.

- Officers drag an unresisting, clothed Carr in handcuffs from a cruiser through cellblock hallways by her elbows.
- They lead her into a room with a counter, lower her head-first onto the floor. Her head comes off the floor and falls back as they shift her body.

- She is lying face-down. Officers remove her cuffs. Then they take two objects from her hair or neck. One officer kneels on Carr's back as the police wrap a strap around her arms. They hoist her to her feet and walk her to a cell.
- Later, officers run to her cell. There is no camera inside the cell. Clothes are tossed out.
- An hour and 10 minutes later, a female officer brings Carr what appears to be a gown, which is then tossed out a minute later. Several hours later, an officer leads Carr, now wearing a white gown, from her cell to retrieve her clothes from a bin. She gets changed in another room.

- Carr, again in her black shirt and pants, stands at a counter signing documents. She leaves the cellblock, stops in a stairwell to put her hair in a ponytail and leaves the station.

► Premier Dalton McGuinty attends a luncheon at the Chateau Laurier on Thursday, seated beside Erin Kelly, executive director of the Ottawa Chamber of Commerce, and Chamber chair Dave Donaldson.

McGuinty talks tough

► Saying he represents 40 per cent of Canada, Premier claims he has a responsibility to stand up to Ottawa

@METRONEWS.CA

When Dalton McGuinty takes a hard line with the federal government, it's because he has to speak for you, the premier said in Ottawa on Thursday.

"We're proud Canadians, but we've got a few issues with the feds," McGuinty said after a speech at a Chateau Laurier luncheon hosted by the Ottawa Chamber of Commerce.

McGuinty said he wants to see Ottawa play a stronger role in building pan-Canadian approaches to health care — such as national strategies on seniors' care, homecare and pharmacare — and offer better long-term funding.

"I'm pleased that the prime minister has committed to a six per cent increase in federal health transfers, that's a great start," he said, "but so far there has not been a commitment to a long-term view for the provinces, a smart view that drives change that's necessary and achievable."

McGuinty repeated other recent criticisms of the federal government, saying the billions of dollars Ontario doles out in equalization payments are "unacceptable," and he wants the feds to use some of that money for Ontario's green-energy sector.

The Progressive Conservatives Thursday released a statement saying that McGuinty "can't be trusted with health care dollars."

This week, McGuinty also took on the federal government over a program for farmers, which prompted Gerry Ritz, the agriculture minister, to retort that the premier — whose party is trailing the PCs in the polls — is motivated by "political pressure of an upcoming election."

Asked Thursday if the tough talk is an election strategy, McGuinty said, "It's a responsibility I have on behalf of Ontarians to give expression to our concerns."

Police suspect arson in pastry shop blaze

JOE LOFARO/METRO

A fire that swept through the Pasticceria Gelateria Italiana in Little Italy on Thursday is being investigated by the Ottawa Police Arson Unit.

Ottawa Fire Services received the call just before 4 a.m. Upon arrival, firefighters battled heavy flames in the dining area at 200 and 198 Preston St. Firefighters completed their investigation Thursday afternoon and determined the fire was incendiary.

Shards of glass and mounds of ash littered the front steps of the pastry shop as police carried out their investigation and owner Joe Calabro looked on from across the street.

"Firefighters did manage

► A suspicious fire ripped through the Pasticceria Gelateria Italiana on Thursday.

to contain the fire to that area. However, there was heavy smoke damage throughout the main floor," said Marc Messier, spokesperson for Ottawa Fire Services.

The second floor suffered minor smoke damage. Messier said damages to the building are estimated at $125,000.

The shop is a mainstay in Little Italy, having served the community for 32 years. Calabro said his main concern now is to get wedding cakes out for his customers for the weekend.

Cheap Trick looks for explanation

- ▶ Rock band trying to get information on stage collapse
- ▶ 'What are organizers doing to protect the next act?'

Cheap Trick is asking for a full account of what went wrong when a stage it was performing on toppled during a violent summer gale at Ottawa Bluesfest.

Thousands of people scurried for cover as scaffolding buckled during the band's set earlier this month. Four people — including the group's truck driver — were hurt in the incident.

In a note posted to Cheap Trick's website, the band's manager requests more information on the cause of the frightening event.

Manager Dave Frey points out in the note that other temporary structures remained intact and asks if there may have been a design flaw.

Ontario's Ministry of Labour is investigating the incident, and the band says it is "actively participating" in the inquiry.

Frey said the veteran band wants to prevent similar incidents from happening in the future.

"We simply want to know: what are the companies and organizers doing to protect the next act and the next audience?" Frey asked in the online message, posted Thursday.

"Every act and every fan ought to be asking the same question when attending an outside musical event."

The collapse occurred July 17, the final day of the 12-day music show.

Bluesfest, one of North America's largest musical events, features some of the best international talent appearing on various stages throughout the festival.

"Was it a design flaw? Was it an implementation mistake? These are important questions that must be answered," asked Frey.

Ottawa Bluesfest executive director Mark Monahan has said he's looking at closer liaison with the weather office in the wake of a violent summer gale that toppled the main stage at the festival.

A group of high school students put their heads together for the Shad Valley Open House at Carleton University and came up with a solution to protect epileptic kids from injury during seizures.

This year's theme for Shad Valley, a four-week enrichment program hosted at Canadian university campuses, was "Life-Improving Solutions for Disabled Children." Neha Puri, 16, Malan Hevapanangi, 17, and Michael Rybak, 16, and their "Green House" team developed a prototype of a baseball cap made with a lining of dense molecular liquid that hardens at the time of impact.

"We called Epilepsy Ontario and one thing that they really emphasized was the fact that during seizures, which happens when you have epilepsy, a lot of children can have damage to their heads because they can hit their head against desks or walls," said Puri, a Toronto native. "So we developed a baseball cap that functions as a helmet."

Green House came out on top at Carleton and will head to the University of Waterloo in October to showcase their products against finalists from nine other host Canadian universities.

The Green House wasn't the only team with a novel idea. Sixteen-year-olds Winnie Ma and Fandi Meng developed an iPad application that uses audio and video games for kids with autism and learning disabilities.

Another team developed toys in the shapes of the alphabet that produce vibrations for kids with hearing disabilities.

World's Top Coin Collectors in Town Next Week to Purchase All Types of Coins!

By DAVID MORGAN
STAFF WRITER

ICC will be placing ads in newspapers, radio and running television spots this week asking people to bring in any old silver and gold coins made before 1968 and U.S. coins made before 1965. Those that bring in their coins will be able to speak with collectors one on one and have their coins looked at by a specialist. With the help of these ICC members, offers will be made to those that have coins made before 1968. Offers will be made based on silver or gold content and the rarity of the coins. All coins made before 1968 will be examined and purchased including gold coins, silver coins, silver dollars, all types of nickels and pennies. Those that decide to sell their coins will be paid on the spot.

If you are like a lot of people you might have a few old coins or even a coffee can full lying around. If you have ever wondered what they are worth now might be your chance to find out and even sell them if you choose. They could be worth a lot according to the International Coin Collectors also known as ICC. Collectors will pay a fortune for some coins and currency for their collections. If it is rare enough, one coin could be worth over $100,000 according to Eric Helms, coin collector and ICC member. One ultra rare dime, an 1894S Barber, sold for a record $1.9 million to a collector in July of 2007. While that is an extreme example, many rare and valuable coins are stashed away in dresser drawers or lock boxes around the country. The ICC and its collector members have organized a traveling event in search of all types of coins and currency. Even common coins can be worth a significant amount due to the high price of silver and gold, says Helms. Washington quarters and Roosevelt dimes can be worth many times their face value. Recent silver markets have driven the price up on common coins made of silver. Helms explains that all U.S. half dollars, quarters and dimes made before 1965 contain 90% silver and are sought after any time silver prices rise. Right now it's a sellers market he said.

The rarest coins these collectors are looking for include $20, $10, $5 and $2 1/2 gold coins and any coin made before 1850. These coins always bring big premiums according to the ICC. Silver dollars are also very sought after nowadays.

Other types of items the ICC will be purchasing during this event include U.S. currency, gold bullion, investment gold, silver bars, silver rounds, proof sets, etc. Even foreign coins are sought after and will be purchased.

Also at this event anyone can sell their gold jewelry, dental gold or anything made of gold on the spot. Gold is currently trading at over $1,500.00 per ounce near an all time high. Bring anything you think might be gold and the collectors will examine, test and price it for free. If you decide to sell, you will be paid on the spot – it has been an unknown fact that coin dealers have always paid more for jewelry and scrap gold than other jewelers and pawn brokers.

So whether you have one coin you think might be valuable or a large collection you recently inherited, you can talk to these collectors for free. If you're lucky you may have a rarity worth thousands. Either way there is nothing to lose and it sounds like fun!

A Winnipeg woman who has worked in the sex trade has been ordered held in jail because of the threat the community faces if she doesn't complete treatment for infectious tuberculosis.

Health officials have won a rare order from the courts under the Public Health Act to keep the 30-year-old locked up in a provincial corrections facility for 90 days. The woman was diagnosed with "untreated active" TB in late December, but has breached terms of treat-

Anti-racist activists are planning to scour a Calgary neighbourhood to remove hateful posters associated with Blood and Honour Canada.

URGENT: Famine in the Horn of Africa

Millions face starvation. Canadian government will match your donation to help children and families.

Deadly hunger is sweeping through Somalia, where the United Nations has declared a famine. Children are dying as it spreads into Kenya and Ethiopia.

Thousands of desperate people are coming to World Vision. Many, critically malnourished themselves, beg for food for their emaciated children. For many, death is only days or hours away.

We are providing life-saving emergency food and water, preventing the spread of disease, and will help families rebuild their lives. But the need is desperate, and more support is needed immediately.

Please act now. Your gift doubles in value.

The Canadian government will make an equivalent contribution from its East Africa Drought Fund. Your gift of $50 will provide $100 of life-saving food for desperate children and families. $100 provides $200 of food. Please respond now.

Bitter battle to help the hungry

► Troops fight militants blocking vital food supplies

Helping the starving turned lethal in Somalia's capital Thursday.

African Union troops fought house-to-house battles with militants in Mogadishu to clear space for aid groups bringing in food supplies.

Meanwhile, intelligence reports showed insurgents reinforcing for a possible attack on squalid camps of famine refugees.

Heavy fighting erupted on the line of control between the government side and territory held by al-Shabab, Somalia's dominant militant group.

At least six people were killed.

Somalia's famine is unfolding in the middle of a war zone, greatly compli-

Somalia's reality

► Al-Shabab militants already have killed men who tried to escape the famine with their families, saying it is better to starve than accept help from the West.

cating international efforts to prevent a wave of death.

The al-Qaida-linked al-Shabab has sent 300 reinforcement fighters to Mogadishu in recent days, said Lt.-Col. Paddy Ankun-da, spokesperson for the African Union peacekeeping force.

Ankunda said the AU force believes al-Shabab is trying to prevent aid from reaching the tens of thousands of famine refugees who have arrived in Mogadishu this month.

The devastating famine in the Horn of Africa threatens al-Shabab's hold on areas it controls.

The militants fear the disaster will drive away the people they tax and conscript into military service.

The World Food Program estimates more than 11.3 million people need aid across drought-hit regions in East Africa.

Europe fears copycat terror threat

► Norway attacks may be isolated, but European officials worry they will inspire other extremists

Norway cast it as the isolated act of a lone-wolf terrorist, whose boasts of a far-flung network of anti-Muslim warriors were the fantasies of a deranged mind.

European officials at an emergency counter-terror meeting see a continent-wide threat from right-wing extremists amid mounting Islamophobia — and warn of possible copycats.

Two visions of the Norway atrocity emerged yesterday, as Europe gropes for answers following a tragedy that claimed the lives of 78 people.

While a picture emerged of a solitary killer, the attack carried out by Anders Behring Breivik has stirred questions in Europe about whether authorities have neglected the threat of right-wing extremists in their push to crack down on Islamist terror groups after 9-11.

At an emergency meeting on the far-right threat, European Union counterterrorism officials warned radicals who share Breivik's ideology might be tempted to follow his lead.

Rookie MPs prepared for the spotlight: NDP

- Layton's absence deprives rookies of role model
- Nearly six-dozen first-timers ► 18 under age 30

The NDP says its bumper crop of youngsters is prepared to step out of the shadows and take on a more prominent role during the absence of party leader Jack Layton.

While many never bothered to campaign during the election because they never expected to win, the rookies have spent the post-election period playing catch-up — going door-to-door and studying local issues.

One of the party's more experienced MPs, Megan Leslie, describes the process as a "baptism by fire" — one that has helped prepare the youngsters for the daunting task ahead.

Layton's absence means the new MPs may absorb some of the public scrutiny that would normally

"If what the new MPs have achieved so far is any indication of the future, we're going to be fine."

NDP MP MEGAN LESLIE

have fallen on Layton.

But Leslie, who is mentoring five of the party's new Quebec MPs, says the busy months that followed the May 2 federal election forced the party's newcomers to learn quickly.

Even before the NDP leader's stunning announcement earlier this week, she suggested the rookies had already faced an unusually intense introduction to elected life.

First the newbies walked into the House of Commons without aides, offices or virtually any orientation as they struggled to fill a historic number of vacant political staff positions.

Then, Leslie noted, came the NDP's marathon, 58-hour filibuster to delay back-to-work legislation for Canada Post.

Leslie said Layton's news hit hard.

However, Leslie says Layton's health has brought the party closer together and predicts it will have a positive effect.

Interim leader

- New Democrats got their first taste of life without Jack Layton Thursday as the party confirmed rookie MP Nycole Turmel as its interim leader.
- Layton's hand-picked stand-in immediately faced tough questions about her inexperience, her laboured English and her past endorsement of separatist politicians.
- She was forced to fend off Conservative attempts to cast doubt on the depth of NDP deputy leader

Thomas Mulcair's loyalty to his party.

- And she seemed flustered as she dodged the most basic question: Why does the party need to go through the formal process of appointing an interim leader if Layton intends to be back on the job by Sept. 19?
- "Until (Layton) returns, I clearly have big shoes to fill," Turmel acknowledged moments after the party's national council unanimously confirmed her appointment.

Only 20... and ready

NDP Leader Jack Layton's absence should not change the game plan of younger New Democrats, says 20-year-old MP Charmaine Borg, one of the youngest parliamentarians in Canadian history.

"We've always been given an opportunity to stand up and to say what we want to say, and we're certainly respected in caucus as much as any other MP," said Borg, a former co-president of the NDP club at McGill, a school that saw five of its students elected as New Democrat MPs.

The Canadian Press recently followed Borg during a work day in her riding of Terrebonne-Blainville, where she appeared at ease with local officials, a powerful union boss and municipal environmental patrollers.

Still, as a native Ontarian who only campaigned in her riding for a few hours before the election, Borg admits she has much to learn about the place.

Army: Soldier had guns, bomb

► It's alleged he planned attack on base where 13 died

An absentee Muslim soldier who had weapons stashed in a motel room near Fort Hood has admitted planning an attack on the iconic Texas post, authorities say.

Thirteen people died at Fort Hood in 2009 in the worst mass shooting ever on a U.S. military installation.

Pfc. Naser Abdo, 21, was arrested Wednesday and agents found firearms and "items that could be identified as bomb-making components, including gunpowder," in his motel room, said FBI spokesperson Erik Vasys.

The army said the man arrested by Killeen police

► Pfc. Naser Abdo

"was in possession of a large quantity of ammunition, weapons and a bomb inside a backpack."

Upon questioning, the army said, he admitted to planning an attack on Fort Hood.

Officials have not offered details about Abdo's possible intentions.

The infantry soldier had applied for conscientious-objector status last year, saying his religious beliefs should prohibit his service in any war.

A military review board recommended this spring that he be separated from the army.

But the discharge was delayed after he was charged with possessing child pornography and an Article 32 military hearing last month recommended he be court-martialled. He has been absent without leave from Fort Campbell, Kentucky, since the July 4 weekend.

US officials: Iran in cahoots with al-Qaida

► Country's most serious allegation to date of Iranian aid to terrorist group

The Obama administration accused Iran on Thursday of entering into a "secret deal" with an al-Qaida offshoot that provides money and recruits for attacks in Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The Treasury Department designated six members of the unit as terrorists subject to U.S. sanctions.

The U.S. intelligence community has in the past disagreed about the extent of direct links between the Iranian government and al-Qaida.

Thursday's allegations went further than what most analysts had previously said was a murky relationship with limited co-operation.

David S. Cohen, Treasury's point man for terrorism and financial intelligence, said Iran entered a "secret deal with al-Qaida allowing it to funnel funds and operatives through its territory."

He didn't provide any details of that agreement, but said the sanctions seek to disrupt al-Qaida's work in Iraq and deny the terrorist group's leadership much-needed support. "Iran is the leading state sponsor of terrorism in the world today," Cohen said in a statement. "We are illuminating yet another aspect of Iran's unmatched support for terrorism."

The sanctions block any assets the individuals might have held in the United States, and bans Americans from doing any business with them.

Families of jailed hikers remain hopeful

The families of two Americans imprisoned in Iran for nearly two years say they're counting on a court hearing Sunday to end their ordeal at last.

Shane Bauer and Josh Fattal, both 29, are due for what Iranian authorities have said will be a final hearing in their protracted espionage case. It's scheduled two years to the day after they were arrested along with another American, Sarah Shourd, during a hike on the Iraq-Iran border. Shourd was released last September.

Tehran's chief prosecutor, Abbas Jafari Dowlatabadi, told Iran's official news agency in June that officials "are hopeful that the final decision about the three Americans' case will be taken" at Sunday's hearing. He did not hint at what the decision might be. But the families, who have long maintained the hikers' innocence, took his comments as a good sign that their ordeal will soon be over.

"I am more than eager to see Josh and Shane come home," said Josh's mother, Laura Fattal, of Pennsylvania. She said she sees the hearing date — the second anniversary of their arrest — as a good sign.

The families have been working to make sure Iranian authorities know the rest of the world is watching.

They've elicited statements of support from President Barack Obama, Secretary of State Hillary Shourd, Laura Fattal and Josh's brother, Alex Fattal, planned a rally in New York on Friday outside the Iranian mission to the United Nations.

Shourd, Bauer and Fattal, friends from their student days at the University of California-Berkeley, were vacationing in Iraqi Kurdistan when they went hiking near a scenic waterfall. Shourd told the New York Times last November that they stepped off an unmarked dirt road, inadvertently crossing from Iraq into Iran only because a border guard of unknown nationality gestured for them to approach.

She said they had no idea they were so close to the border. They all deny any espionage.

Shourd, now 32, and Bauer got engaged in prison before she was released for humanitarian grounds following health issues.

"As soon as Shane gets out we're getting married," she said. "It's been a long time coming."

A family's search for the perfect cottage.

The search for a family cottage isn't as easy as one might think. It's location, amenities, activities for the kids and more importantly fitting the purchase into the family budget. Everyone has a favourite memory of spending summers at the cottage and if you don't you must have heard a story or two.

The cottage experience is as Canadian as peameal bacon or real maple syrup and should be experienced by everyone at least once in their life. Sitting by a campfire roasting hot dogs, making "spider dogs" or toasting marshmallows, making "smores" is a rite of passage for any young camper.

As we looked into cottages we found it was quite simple to find something to rent but what about ownership? The thought of being able to escape after a long week at work would be great. Along with my kids having a safe and memorable place to spend their summers would be more than perfect.

After a lot of research what we found is, that cottages can be very expensive to say the least. Gone were the days when I grew up, where a $20,000 investment got you a family cottage on the lake. The cottages we liked seemed to cost as much as our home if not more, with some over four hundred thousand dollars. The more we thought about cottage ownership the more we realized it would mean two houses to maintain financially and physically. After all the whole idea was to get away from cutting grass and fixing things so I could spend more time with my children and simply relaxing.

"Fractional Ownership" cottages were affordable but they have maintenance fees and we couldn't justify spending over one hundred thousand dollars for something the family could only use for only 4 or 5 weeks a year.

So what was the answer? McCreary's Beach Resort on Mississippi Lake was the perfect spot for my family. Less than 30 minutes from Ottawa, McCreary's Beach Resort was one of the best lakefront properties we had come across.

It sounded all too good to be true, full ownership, maintenance free and activities for the kids...so what's was the catch? We soon found out there wasn't one.

After a resort tour, we knew McCreary's Beach Resort was the perfect alternative for our family. We got a beautiful location on the water, a short drive from our home and a budget-friendly family "cottage" that we own.

Ventura Resorts call them "Resort Cottages", the affordable way to own a family summer getaway. Neither a typical trailer nor conventional cottage, these 3 season homes are beautifully furnished and professionally decorated with "at home" amenities including full-sized kitchens, 4 piece baths and large decks, and you can get it all from $61,900 to $109,900. The Resort Cottages are available in one, two and three bedroom floor plans that can sleep up to eight people comfortably.

Car sales revving up, says report

► Scotiabank reports global car sales up five per cent in first half of 2011 ► Surge expected in latter half

A Scotiabank report says car sales are picking up around the world, despite a host of troubles facing economies everywhere — and they're going to get hotter in the latter half of this year.

The bank says in its latest global auto report that sales were up five per cent in the first half of 2011, despite government debt problems in Europe, shortages from Japanese automakers and consumers jittery about rising oil prices and volatile financial markets.

The bank expects a surge in global car sales in the last half of the year, as parts shortages wear off, consumer confidence improves and job creation in emerging markets stays solid.

The report says Canadian auto sales grew three per cent in the first half of the year and are expected to rise to 1.59 million this year.

But sales in the U.S. are still lagging behind, and are expected to stay at least 20 per cent below that country's average for the last 10 years.

The bank added that auto sales in the United States will grow by September, as Japanese automakers are predicted to launch major sales.

Factory workers raise stink

Workers at a diaper factory in France are raising a stink about management's plans to close the plant — in the process, sending a creative plea for help to France's pregnant first lady.

Employees at the Ontex factory in Villefranche-sur-Saône have sent 187 diapers to Carla Bruni-Sarkozy, the wife of French President Nicolas Sarkozy. That's one diaper for each employee in the plant, and a none-too-subtle message that while the diapers might be disposable, their jobs aren't.

Union leader Bernard Leblond said workers had "stuck a bright yellow sticker" saying "made in France by the 187 workers of Ontex" on the box with the diapers and sent it to the mansion where Bruni-Sarkozy is spending her summer vacation.

Sweet smell of victory

► Ex-football player Isaiah Mustafa, a.k.a. the Old Spice Guy.

► Isaiah Mustafa, a.k.a. the Old Spice Guy, wins out over Fabio in 'Mano a Mano en El Bano' contest

The Old Spice Guy has won his hunk-off with Fabio.

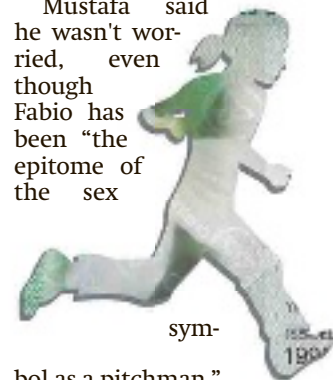

Former football player Isaiah Mustafa has been lead spokesman for the Procter & Gamble Co. brand of men's body washes and deodorants for nearly two years, starring in a popular series of marketing campaigns relying heavily on YouTube, Twitter and other social media.

Now, he has held off a playful effort by the Italian model to become "the new Old Spice Guy."

In a series of videos culminating Thursday, the muscular pitchmen duelled in tongue-in-cheek challenges from one another and viewers. They held staring and whistling contests, bantered and gave advice on writing love letters and working out. P&G says Mustafa won based on consumer feedback such as "likes" and online comments.

They called the competition "Mano a Mano en El Bano" (hand-to-hand in the bathroom).

Mustafa said he wasn't worried, even though Fabio has been "the epitome of the sex bol as a pitchman."

"Not at all," he told The Associated Press. "There are so many fans that enjoy the Old Spice Guy, there's not really a calling for him to disappear."

Even "the ferocious Ray Lewis," the Baltimore

Ravens football linebacker, has taken a recent turn pitching Old Spice products, Mustafa pointed out.

The campaigns started with Mustafa appearing in a shower clad only in a towel and urging women to look at their man, and then back at him. Then followed an online video series, including one in which he suggested President Barack Obama could improve poll ratings among women by opening speeches with Mustafa's "Hello, ladies" greeting.

The campaigns engineered by Portland, Ore.-based agency Wieden+Kennedy won advertising industry awards, boosted Old Spice sales and have been cited by P&G CEO Bob McDonald as a leading example of the power of multimedia marketing.

Brand manager Allison Bolyard said Old Spice will "continue to find a variety of entertaining ways to engage consumers ... we love to surprise our consumers."

Mustafa said he expects to stay on as Old Spice pitchman "as long as people like the character and are having fun with it." Meanwhile, he continues to pursue his acting career in TV and movies including small roles in the current comedy Horrible Bosses and next year's Three Stooges movie.

Procter & Gamble, maker of consumer products including Pampers diapers, Pantene shampoo and Gillette shavers, is scheduled to report its fourth-quarter earnings Aug. 5.

A PARTICLE OF HOPE AMID TRAGEDY

THE METRO LIST

PAUL SULLIVAN
METRO

It's hard to believe all this happened in just one week. Whatever happened to the "silly season"?

1 Tragedy in Norway. A lunatic murders dozens of innocent young people to make some kind of stupid point. What could be more horrifying and pointless? Lesson No. 1: Disarm all the Nazis. Carefully.

2 The 27 Club. A different kind of tragedy as Amy Winehouse joins a self-destructive fraternity of young people who make beautiful music but can't face the music. Good news/bad news: She left behind a partially completed album, so she'll haunt the Billboard 100 for some time to come.

3 Jack Layton. Let's hope Canada's favourite champagne socialist gets an opportunity to raise a glass in celebration at least one more time.

4 The God particle. God may or may not exist, but there is new evidence that the God Particle does. Deep in the bowels of the CERN atom smasher in Switzerland, the enigmatic Higgs Boson, which theoretically imparts mass to all other elemental particles, leaves tantalizing tracks in the virtual sand. Go ahead Neo, take the red pill.

5 Peace-making Pakistani. Remember this name: Hini Rabbani Khar, the best-looking foreign minister on the planet, and the youngest. At 34, Pakistan's foreign minister has just finished a visit to arch-enemy India, where she charmed the dickens out of her Indian counterpart, S.M. Kirshna, 79. The two nations promise "a new era" of co-operation. She's not just another pretty face.

6 Speaking of pretty Faces. Hugh Hefner's 25-year-old ex-fiancée Crystal Harris tells Howard Stern she only had sex once with the octogenarian Big Bunny and it only lasted "like two seconds." I bet it was the best two seconds of Hef's long, long life.

7 The famine in Somalia. Let me get this straight. There are two million people in Somalia on the brink of starvation, and the faction in charge of the blighted area, al-Shabab, believes it will be better for the people to starve to death than accept aid from western infidel dogs. Just for a second there, thanks to Hini Rabbani Khar, the world was starting to make sense. Now, thanks to al-Shabab, it's back to normal.

8 The cod's back, 'by. Break out the Screech because there's cause for joy on the Grand Banks, as for the first time since the fishery shut down in 2003, the cod are starting to come back — one third of their levels from the '70s and '80s, and growing. Not yet time to rebuild the boat, 'by, but close.

Worth Mentioning

GLOBAL WARMING. A wildlife biologist whose observation that polar bears likely drowned in the Arctic helped galvanize the global warming movement seven years ago was placed on administrative leave as officials investigate scientific misconduct allegations.

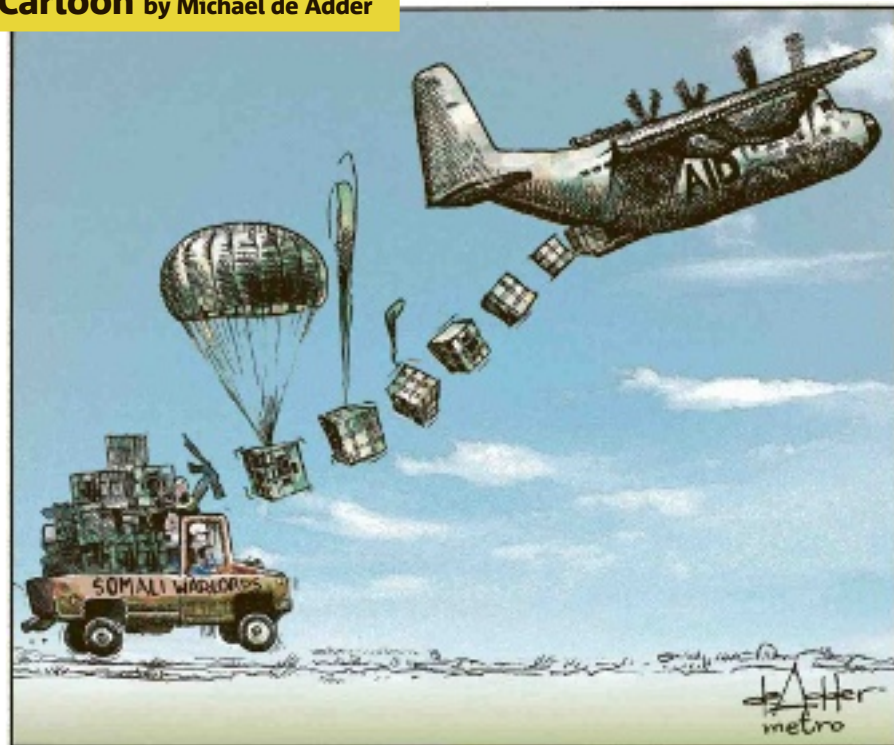

Although it wasn't clear what the exact allegations are, a government watchdog group representing Anchorage-based scientist Charles Monnett said investigators have focused on his 2006 journal article about the bears that garnered worldwide attention.

Whatever the outcome or the nature of the allegations, the investigation will likely fuel the ongoing fight between climate change activists and those who are skeptical of scientists' findings about global warming. The probe also focuses attention on an Obama administration policy intended to protect scientists from political interference.

In May 2008, the polar bear was classified as a threatened species, the first with its survival at risk due to global warming.

Fugitive who said 'catch me if you can' caught

A fugitive who taunted police on his Facebook page to 'catch me if you can. I'm in Brooklyn' has been arrested.

The Daily News says U.S. marshals and NYPD detectives tracked Victor Burgos down to an apartment in Brooklyn's Bedford-

Stuyvesant neighbourhood Monday night, sitting at a computer with his Facebook page open.

The 29-year-old suspect was wanted by police in Utica, N.Y., on multiple arrest warrants for domestic violence and harassment of his former girlfriend.

He allegedly issued the Facebook challenge after his mug shot appeared on the Utica Police Department's 10 most wanted list.

Utica Sgt. Steve Hauck tells the News: "He told us via Facebook to come and get him and we did."

Plot synopsis

When nearly divorced Cal Weaver (Steve Carell) begins hanging around a trendy LA bar he meets Jacob (Ryan Gosling), a handsome slick talker who offers to tutor him in the art of being single. Interwoven are two other love stories — the trials of Cal's son (Jonah Bobo) who thinks his babysitter (Analeigh Tipton) is his soul mate and Hannah's (Emma Stone) search for the right guy.

Gosling gets funny

► Canadian actor, best known for turns in darker roles, shines in Crazy, Stupid Love ► Breezy rom com has substance beneath the sweetness

Richard: As good as Steve Carell is here I have a feeling the person everyone will be talking about on the way out of the theatre is Ryan Gosling. He reveals a gift for comedy, a magnificent abdominal area and the ability to take a stereotype and turn it into a living, breathing character. Agree or no?

MB: Yes, this is a great leap forward for an actor who has played a variety of depressives, mumbler, and addicts. He looks great in a sharp cut jacket and crackles with charisma. Of course, he's got the fun role, but still, he adds something extra to the stock character of the lothario with a wounded heart. And by the way the female members of the audience swooned when he took off his shirt. Gosling has matured into one fine Canada Goose.

RC: It's true. Young Hercules seems like a long time ago now. If Gosling can erase his slightly embarrassing TV past away, then I think this is the movie that will go a long way to erase the image of Steve Carell as that guy from The Office. He was masterful on that show and has been good in other movies — particularly as the depressed Uncle Frank in Little Miss Sunshine — but here he absolutely nails the mix of comedy and pathos needed to make Crazy, Stupid, Love so memorable.

MB: Right, but I couldn't help notice your lack of praise for his recent film work, which I find tepid and tweeby. Here Carell can get his chops into a script that goes beyond his usual hangdog schlemiels and grow a pair. And it's a joy to watch. But Richard, let's not leave out the perfectly cast supporting roles. I loved both the babysitter and Carell's 13-year-old son. Any other standouts for you? Or can we give the directing team their kudos? I've rarely seen better direction in a rom com.

RC: I agree all round. It's a cut above the usual rom

com, reminding me more of the Neil Simon relationship movies of the '70s that were family dramas disguised as sex comedies. As for the supporting cast, I have to say I called it for Emma Stone when I first saw her in Superbad.

MB: By the way, I wasn't sure about the movie at first. The plot seemed to be too close to something Dane Cook might have done in his brief heyday, but then it ripened into a full-fledged, perfect farce with all the plot strands coming together. The ending's a bit sentimental, and I've always hated when characters express their feelings in a Big Speech, but these are tiny quibbles.

Movie reviews

Cowboys and Aliens*Genre: Action, Sci-FiDirector: Jon FavreauStars: Daniel Craig, Harrison Ford and Olivia Wilde

What's really stupefying about Jon Favreau's genre mash-up Cowboys and Aliens is that none of its five credited screenwriters notices how clunky, artless and just plain awful most of the dialogue sounds.

The cowboys spend so much of the film sitting around talking and whining that you find yourself rooting for the aliens — and wishing they'd show up sooner.

The real shame, though, is the wasted pedigree at every level, from a skilled genre director (Favreau) to blockbuster godfathers as producers (Steven Spielberg and Ron Howard) to a dream cast (Harrison Ford, Daniel Craig, Olivia Wilde and Sam Rockwell).

That so many great elements can add up to so little makes you wonder where it all went so terribly, terribly wrong.

● NED EHRBAR

The Smurfs*Genre: Animation, comedyDirector: Raja GosnellStars: Neal Patrick Harris

It becomes clear about midway through the climactic battle scene in The Smurfs that the adorable blue characters are pretty much just using their namesake favourite word in place of cursing.

And thinking too much about the implications of the plot will only lead to migraines. Neal Patrick Harris and Glee scene-stealer Jayma Mays do their best, but the stuntcasting of the blue heroes (with George Lopez and Katy Perry in major roles) grates.

Spoiler alert: The obvious and awful joke — "I smurfed a girl and I liked it" appears — and doesn't even make sense, since there's only one girl Smurf. Despite being beloved kids' entertainment, the film is targeted at the 25 to 40 crowd. Whose smurfing idea was that? ● NED EHRBAR

Emphasis on the R-rating

► Body-switching movies have been done before ► But Change-Up stars Ryan Reynolds and Jason Bateman say where their film differs is the rating

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

MWN IN HOLLYWOOD

Playing best friends who magically switch bodies in The Change-Up, real-life friends Ryan Reynolds and Jason Bateman have had plenty of time to think about what they'd do if they found themselves in that situation in real life.

"I'd do terrible things to his body," Reynolds admits.

Bateman, not batting an eye, finishes the thought for him: "And to my wife. He's been after my wife for years," to which Reynolds nods solemnly, adding, "Years, years. And she will be mine."

Kidding — we hope — aside, the two friends were excited enough about the idea to work off of each other's quirks.

In the film, Bateman's straight-laced family man finds himself navigating the world of a layabout bachelor, while Reynolds' barely employed actor takes on a wife and kids and a rough week at work as a lawyer.

But while they may seem perfect for their roles — Bateman as the straight-laced family man and Reynolds as the pot-smoking ladies man — the guys insist they didn't really mind who played which role. In fact, Reynolds doesn't think he's any more like one character than the other.

"When you buy a ticket to an R-rated film, you want R-rated comedy."

JASON BATEMAN

"I've got to say I'm somewhere in the middle," he says.

"There was a time in my life when I'd wake up mornings in a shallow pool of my own fluid, but those days are over. I eat breakfast now, not ketchup. It's different now."

Bateman, though, definitely related to the husband and father he plays on screen, even if he was concerned it might not fit with the kind of raunchy comedy they were going for.

"You look at the domestic part of this film and you think is that going to soften the R-rating?" he admits.

"Because when you buy a ticket to an R-rated film, you want R-rated comedy."

The Change-Up is most definitely an R-rated comedy, and the two actors are more than proud of it.

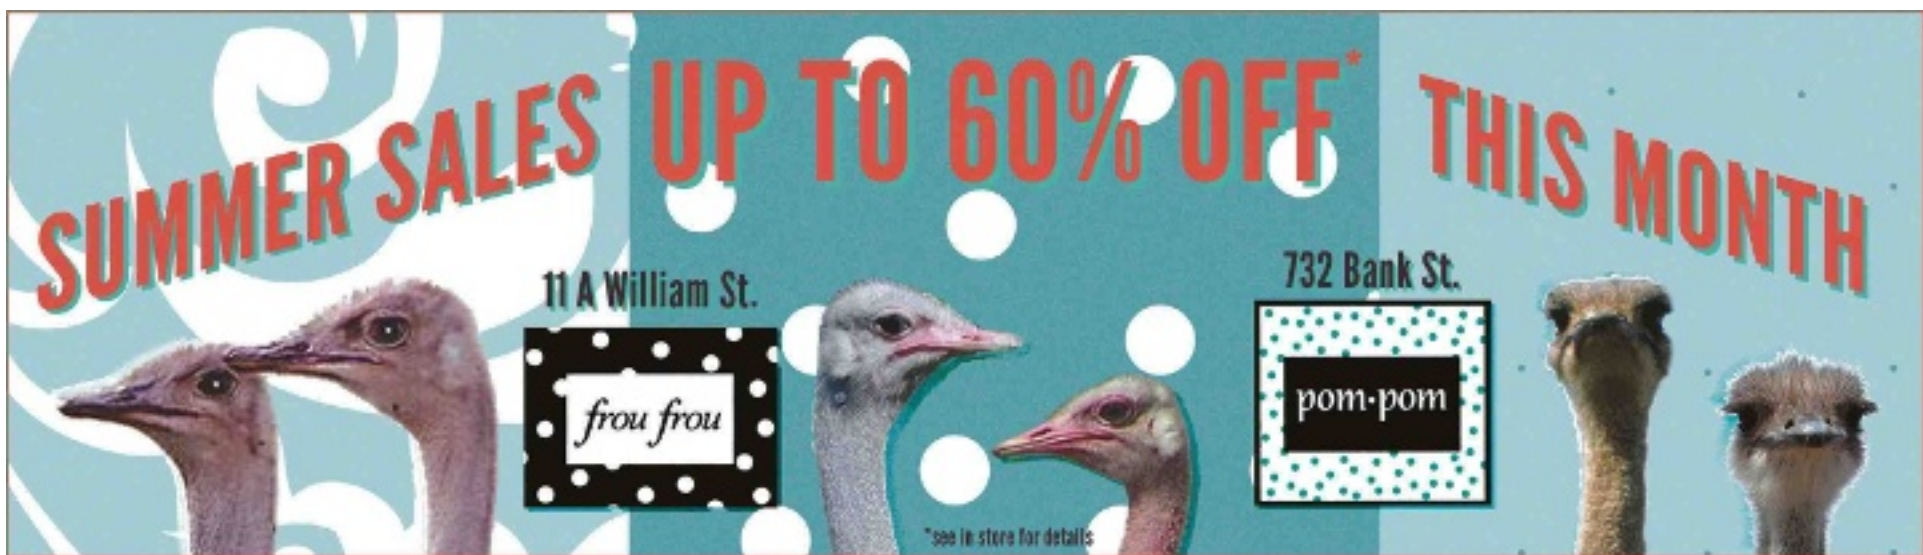

"You want to go in there, have a good time, laugh your ass off, maybe get offended a couple of times and get the hell out. We're not trying to win Oscars here or teach anybody any lessons," Bateman says.

"There's no reason to do another body-switching movie unless you're going to do something different. And we do here. This is an R-rated body-switching movie, that hasn't been done before."

Reynolds is right there with him, as he says he definitely prefers R-rated material.

"Every PG-13 comedy I've ever done, you always have that inevitable moment halfway through shooting when you call the studio head and go, 'Are you sure we can't go R with this? Because we just shot something terrible,'" he says.

"But there are sometimes when you're in a PG-13 movie when it doesn't need to be rated R. It's very easy to fall back on the idea that you can swear your way out of a scene. But it's nice when you can let it all hang out in a movie like this and not worry too much about pushing it too far."

Films' primate attraction

► Ape-centric films show humans love our not-so-distant cousins

Movies have been messing with apes since a Hollywood director captured and chained that great gorilla on Skull Island and brought him to Broadway in 1933's King Kong.

The reason, of course, is as plain as the image in the mirror.

Apes and monkeys: They're like us, but they're not us. That's the fascination. And it's a great starting point for all kinds of storytelling.

This summer, movies have offered a barrel of monkeys that, at the risk of offending Bonzo and Mighty Joe Young, eclipses all previous comers, not to mention the robots, pirates and wizards currently littering the multiplex.

Monkeys and apes are everywhere, from Crystal, the crazy capuchin seen in The Hangover II to the romance between Kevin James and the Nick Nolte-voiced silverback gorilla in Zookeeper.

Then there's this story of human hubris: Scientists perform experiments on a young chimp and, afterward, abandon it, leaving the animal caught halfway between man and monkey.

It's the premise of not one, but two summer movies: the upcoming reboot Rise of the Planet of the Apes and the Sundance Film Festival documentary sensation, Project Nim, which chronicles a Columbia University professor's radical attempt in the 1970s to teach a chimpanzee sign language by while there may be a lot of overlap, chimps are very distinct and should be left to live among their own kind," says Project Nim producer Simon Chinn.

Rise of the Planet of the Apes, a primate rebellion.

Humans have a "deep, intrinsic attraction to primates," says San Diego Zoo animal care manager Greg Vicino. "They're fascinat-

Cowabunga, dude! Simpsons creeps up on 500 shows

- ▶ America's most dysfunctional family has been entertaining us since 1989
- ▶ Series executive producer Al Jean tells us what's next for Homer and co.

METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

Sick of The Simpsons? Impossible, we say!

The series is set to hit 500 episodes on Feb. 19, 2012, after all.

But according to series executive producer Al Jean, not everyone is feeling the love.

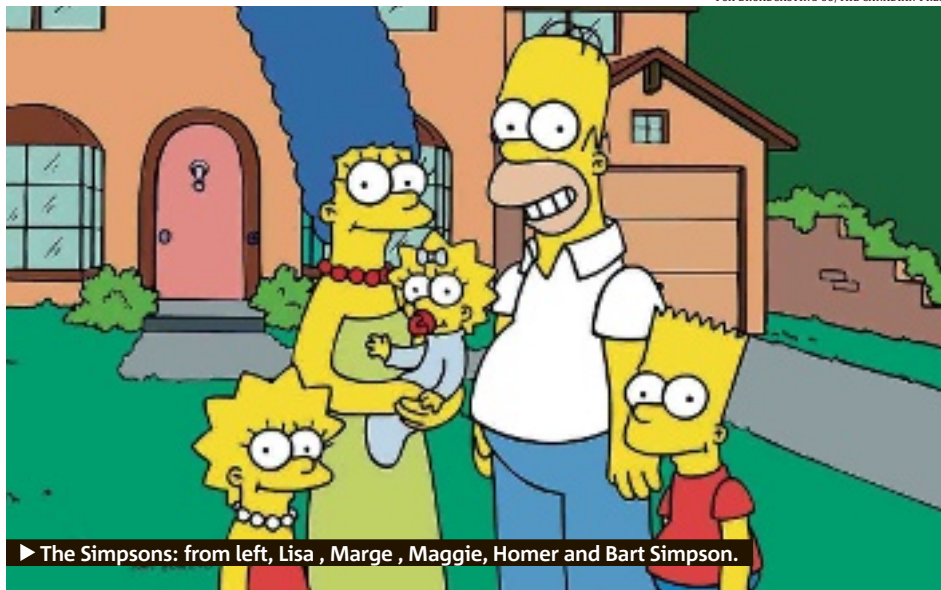

"There's a big town meeting that the Simpsons don't know about, and when they go in, the town is saying, 'We're going to get rid of the Simpsons,'" Jean said Tuesday, explaining the milestone episode's plot to TV critics touring the show's animation studio, Film Roman, in Burbank, Calif.

"They're sick of them."

Highlights

For fans still on Team Simpson, Jean spilled other highlights of Season 23, premiering Sept. 25.

- The Treehouse of Horrors episode will actually air around Halloween this year: Oct. 30.

- Another holiday-themed half-hour — a Christmas episode — takes place 30 years in the future.

"Bart is this lousy, dead-beat dad who actually lives in the school, which is now condos, and Skinner is his landlord," Jean says.

In another episode, Homer becomes a Glenn Beck-like pundit.

He leads the Gravy Boat movement and selects Ted Nugent as his ideal presidential candidate. The Nuge guest stars — and sings!

- Pop-culture spoofs and homages abound.

In a parody of Inception, Jean says: "One dream level was (drawn in) the Tracey Ullman Show style" — like the animated series' early days.

- Another reference of note: Lost.

"We have a show coming up where Homer gets addicted to a show that's basically Lost," Jean says.

"It ended five years ago, but he's like, 'Don't tell me how it ends!' We're doing it post-Lost, and five years from now it will still be post-'Lost,' so it should hold up."

Packing a heavy load

► Rob McElhenney gives his 'Sunny' character some extra weight

It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia star Rob McElhenney got fat on purpose and to make a few weighty points.

He wanted to flesh out the idiocy and vanity of his sitcom's character, Mac. He wanted to satirize the glam appearance of TV actors, no matter how mundane the part they're playing. And, as a bonus, he threw in mockery of society's obsession with looks.

McElhenney, 34, is creator of the sitcom that returns to FX on Sept. 15.

He said what he didn't intend with his 50-pound weight gain for the upcoming season is to make fun of obesity, McElhenney said. Online observers and some fans have expressed concern that Sun-

How to do it

McElhenney, 34, more than doubled his daily food intake to about 5,000 calories, trying to keep it relatively healthy by eating lean protein, brown rice and vegetables.

► It took him five months to gain the weight, which he retained for more than two months of filming. When that ended about a month ago, he went on the food wagon and has lost nearly half of the 50 pounds so far.

ny is taking cheap shots at the overweight, which McElhenney called upsetting.

"It's never been the intention of the show to be mean-spirited. The characters are mean-spirited. The show is satire," he said.

No kidding. One hallmark Sunny episode saw Mac and Dennis (Glenn Howerton) attend opposite sides of an abortion rally to pick up women. Another episode had them explore using wheelchairs as a way to get sympathy and women.

Aaron Paul enjoying his 'Bad' break

No matter how bad life gets for Aaron Paul's character on Breaking Bad, it's hard to hold it against him.

He plays Jesse Pinkman, a drug-dealing slacker turned (spoiler alert) murderer in the show's fourth season.

He works with his former high school chemistry teacher Walter White, played by Bryan Cranston, to produce meth. Cranston's character has cancer and turned to the drug trade to provide for his family after he dies.

As a job in meth would have it, he's gotten increasingly sinister over the course of the show, too.

Many fans find something very good about Jesse, and he's someone they're rooting for.

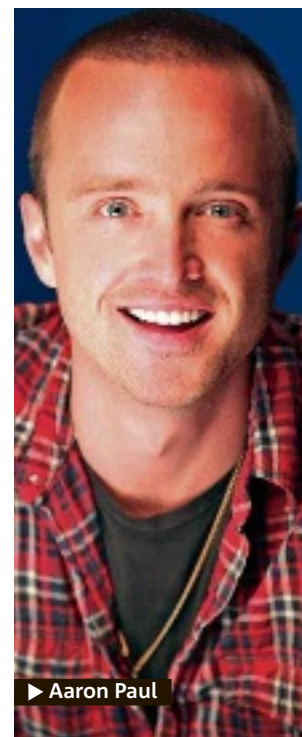

"When Jesse's introduced they see him just like 'OK, he's a bad kid drug dealer,'" says Paul.

"As the show goes on, more layers are revealed ... you see he has a heart and he cares ...

"He's constantly struggling to kind of find his way and to keep his head above water and they sympathize for this character. People are rooting for him."

Critics and Emmy voters are also rooting for 31-year-old Paul.

He has been nominated for an Emmy twice and

won in 2010 in the Best Supporting Actor category for his work on the show. (The show was ineligible for this year's Emmys because the new season returned after ballots were due.)

Where Jesse lacks direction, Paul knows what he would like to see happen on the show.

He wants his character to realize just how negatively Walt has impacted his life.

In season 2 his girlfriend Jane died from a drug overdose witnessed by Walt, who opted not to save her.

Paul believes if Jesse found out, it would turn their relationship upside down because he looks to Walt as a mentor.

"If Jesse finds out the true story of that ... I mean heads are going to roll really. So maybe that might be the end of the show? I don't know," Paul said.

What Paul does know is that when Breaking Bad ends, his experience on the show has raised the bar for the kind of television he would want to do.

Turtle evolves

► Jerry Ferrara's Entourage character has ambitions of his own ► So does the actor who plays him

Jerry Ferrara's character on Entourage, known as Turtle, was first introduced as a pot-smoking slacker living with his movie star friend, working as his chauffeur, and enjoying the perks of being so close to fame.

In the eighth and final season he's an entrepreneur with dreams of his own success who has Mark Cuban on speed dial.

In real life, Ferrara, now 31, has gone through his own transformation over the course of the show.

He's lost roughly 50 pounds and is looking forward to the challenge of finding work beyond Entourage.

"Times are a little bit different now. (In the past) if you were a television actor you were a television actor and if you were a movie actor then that's it," he said. "Now people are segueing from TV to movies rather easily and you're seeing a lot of people go from movies to television so I just think there are no rules anymore."

One thing he can add to his resumé is writing. After "begging for a few years" for an opportunity, Ferrara co-wrote two episodes of Entourage this season after creator Doug Ellin gave him the chance.

"He babysat me along the way," Ferrara said. "It was a goal I had from the very beginning and so we got it in the last season."

Ferrara says it wasn't easy to write for himself.

"I wanted to write myself out of the episode," he said. "I just didn't want anyone to think I was trying to do this to write myself some cool story-line. ... That was my own neurotic brain thinking."

He says he was "terrified" to get his co-stars' reaction at the table read.

Ferrara is also filming a movie called Think Like a Man based on the best-selling relationship advice book written by Steve Harvey.

Showing the best of reel reality

► Filmmaker Morgan Spurlock presents some of the best docs ever — in someone else's opinion

NED EHRBAR
@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD

Documentary filmmaker Morgan Spurlock puts his hosting hat on for 50 Documentaries to See Before You Die, a CurrentTV series debuting Tuesday night in the U.S. But first, he talked to Metro about how the 50 were chosen, his favourite moments of the series and how he sees himself as the documentary equivalent of a drug dealer.

How did you get involved with this project?

Current had this idea of working with the International Documentary Association as well as a lot of esteemed and notable professors of the world of documentary film, and they called me to see if I would be willing to go on the road and do what I usually do in films to explore the world of docs. ... It's like a documentary about documentaries, inside of a documentary.

Did you have any input about which films were included?

I had no say whatsoever. That was the whole thing, I got zero input. I was basically told, "We had real geniuses do this list, not you." So all I got to do was relay the information that much smarter people than me came up with.

Did you find yourself agree-

► Spurlock says good documentaries have great stories.

ing with what they picked?

Yeah. I think most people when they watch the special, there are going to be a lot of films that they agree with, there will be some films that, like me, they'll go, "How can that not be on the list? How can this film not be on the list?" But I think overall people are going to be really excited by it.

What were some of your favourite moments that we'll see?

For me, just travelling around and meeting some of these people that are kind of these film icons. You know, meeting the kids, who are now all grown up, from Hoop Dreams. Meeting Mr. Brainwash — incredible. Meeting the young preacher from Jesus Camp, who still lives in Missouri and is about to go to college. You know, to see these people in real life after you've seen them in films is pretty spectacular.

Do you see this as part of an effort to bring documentaries to more of a mainstream audience?

Yeah, I think that's one of the things that I was excited by about the show ... I like turning people on to gateway docs — docs that will kind of give you your first taste and get you wanting to come back for more. And I think a lot of those are entertaining movies, like King of Kong or Anvil or Exit Through the Gift Shop, Hands on a Hard Body, American Movie. Films that I think have incredibly strong characters, which docs usually do, but also have great stories.

Bringing the house down

► Adele, Chris Brown and Lil Wayne announced as the first performers at this year's MTV Video Music Awards

Chris Brown and Lil Wayne are returning to the MTV Video Music Awards stage, while Adele will make her first appearance.

The trio are the first performers announced for the Aug. 28 ceremony in Los Angeles, at the Nokia Theatre. The announcement was made Thursday.

Brown's star, once tarnished because of his attack on Rihanna, is shining bright this year, and MTV has taken note.

"He is having a moment with multiple hits this year, and he always delivers on the VMA stage," said Amy Doyle, executive vice-president of music and talent at MTV, on Wednesday.

She called his 2007 performance at the VMAs one of the most memorable.

"He will give an energetic, bombastic, jaw-dropping performance."

Adele, who is nominated for seven VMAs, is also scheduled to perform. Only Katy Perry has more VMA nods with nine; Adele is tied with Kanye West with her seven.

Doyle predicted Adele would "bring chills down everybody's spine, if not bring them to tears, too."

Adele has the year's bestselling album with 21, but Doyle notes that her live act hasn't been seen much: Adele was forced to reschedule some concerts earlier this year because of a throat problem.

Lil Wayne's appearance will come a day before the scheduled release of his much-anticipated new album, Tha Carter IV. Like Brown, he has also performed before on the VMAs.

"Being a nominee and performer on the VMAs once again is an honour because everyone doesn't get that opportunity," he said in statement. "Looking forward to performing on the show, and having Tha Carter IV drop the same week!"

Doyle said this year's show has a dynamic set that will "allow for a lot of bells and whistles," and promises that each performance will be unique.

So far, no host has been announced for the typical-

WHAT HAPPENED TO THAT HIT SUMMER SONG?

SOUND CHECK

ALAN CROSS
SCENE
@METRONEWS.CA

It used to be every summer had its song.

No matter where you went, you heard That Song. It spilled from cars, slipped out from underneath ear buds, blared in clubs and floated through stores. And you could never, ever turn on a radio without hearing it.

Last year's song of the summer was California Gurls by Katy Perry. Remember 2009 when Use Somebody from Kings of Leon was played everywhere? I fully intended to write about candidates for the summer song of 2011, but then I ran into a wall. What, pray tell, determines a "hit song" these days?

In the old days, a hit song was the one you heard on the radio the most. Its radio hit-ness factor was determined by (a) how many copies the single sold; and (b) how many radio stations were playing it. At some point over the summer, one song would be played so much that it became indelibly associated with your memories of that year.

If we're to use that standard for the summer of 2011, the current leader is Adele's Rolling in the Deep. No song is being played more often on more radio stations in North America right now.

Today, though, hit songs are determined by more than those two parameters. This is because an increasing number of people now get their music from places other than the radio.

A service called The Ultimate Chart (which monitors everything from plays on YouTube to tweets on Twitter) ranks LMFAO's Party Rock Anthem as the most popular song of the summer of 2011. At number two, it's Skyscraper by Demi Lovato, a song that has had barely any radio airplay at all so far. She's a total online phenom right now. Adele is way down at number eight.

And let's not forget Rebecca Black's Friday. As awful as the song is, the video has been viewed 170 million times on YouTube and parodied millions of times more, all without ever troubling even the lowest regions of the Top 40 radio charts. That's a hit, right?

So what will be the summer hit of 2011? I guess it all depend on where you get your music.

From Mario Bros. to music

► Anamanaguchi are garnering attention for mixing their tunes with the quirky, nostalgic noises of Nintendo

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

As technology has evolved, the sound of video games has moved beyond the arcade bleeps and bleeps of the 1980s and become a viable way for bands to attract new audiences. But Peter Berkman is turning that idea on its head. He and his band, Anamanaguchi, use those bleeps and bleeps to make new music.

As part of the movement known as chiptune, they tear apart the consoles of Nintendo gaming systems and bring the sounds that you remember from days in your friends' basements to the clubs.

What makes Anamanaguchi unique among the other acts within the chiptune genre is that with a lineup that also includes guitar, drums and bass, they inject their songs with a healthy dose of rock.

"The music reminded me of Sonic the Hedgehog

"The music reminded me of Sonic the Hedgehog but still made me want to party."

PETER BERKMAN

but still made me want to party," says Berkman.

Berkman spent his formative years playing video games that featured more technologically advanced audio than the music he currently plays, but there was something about his early childhood that he connected with in the Nintendo sounds.

"It was something fantastic or magic that I couldn't understand," he says of watching his older brother play Nintendo.

"At a very young age, I remember drawing on a piece of paper and taping it to the computer screen, pretending that I made a game. ... It always seemed like something out of my creative reach, but I always wanted to get in there and control it."

And that's exactly what he's doing now.

But he says future Anamanaguchi releases may move onto other gaming systems: "The only reason I'm limiting myself to Nintendo is because it's the platform I'm most familiar with compositionally. But actually, I'm learning new programs to learn new sound sets."

As he continues speaking about his band, he ramps up like a kid speaking about his favourite video game.

Jill from the block... party

► Recording artist Jill Scott chats with Metro about her upcoming concert tour and how she's changed for her child

► Jill Scott

G. VALENTINO
BALL
METRO WORLD NEWS

Jill Scott credits old-fashioned home training with keeping her ego in check.

"My grandmother Blue taught me very early to not get involved in that mentality where you are put on a pedestal," she says.

"Because people on pedestals fall and fall hard."

After her own successful HBO series and starring in a Tyler Perry movie or two, Grammy-award-winner Jill Scott might be putting those skills to use more than ever now.

She's back to her first love, music, scoring her first No. 1 album with her new set, Light Of The Sun. Now as the headliner of The Jill Scott Block Party, she's bringing her soulful sound to a venue near you this summer.

This show is more than just a concert. It feels like a big event.

It's a whole bunch of fun with live musicians and great vocalists. I wanted to hear Stokely (of opening act Mint Condition) and Anthony Hamilton sing every night.

Also I really enjoy hip-hop and nobody is better than DJ Jazzy Jeff. I reached out to him and that's so full circle.

He's the one who was instrumental in putting me out in the first place. And then who's better to keep the party live than Dougie Fresh?

Why did you go with the Block Party concept?

A block party is always a good time.

Not a lot of pretense at a typical block party.

You're going to come. You're going to see the people in your community and have fun.

I like that kind of energy.

What do you think the tone of this new record is?

Freedom. We didn't know what we were going to do. It just happened.

It's been the best time of my career. I have a template now.

I know how I really enjoy creating. I don't want to be in an environment where its "Let's make hits."

What's that? That's work. That's an agenda. This is music.

A lot has changed for you over the past couple years. I've read that taking over the reins of your recording career with your new label deal and a 60-pound weight loss were all part of a plan to set a good example for your toddler.

I want to be around for him. There's something about having a son particularly that put another level of fire under my bones.

I just want to show him how to do the best you can.

That's a good early lesson for him from me. I want him to be proud of me.

LINDA LABAN

It seems that we are born and then spend the rest of our lives finding out who we are. At least Sia, the über-bubbly Australian pop singer-songwriter, would agree with that statement.

"I know, isn't it crazy," the 35-year-old rhetorically gushes.

Sia's latest album, We Are Born, discusses this mortal coil in passionate funk, soul and ballads. Not that she presumes to offer easy explanations, but her lyrics seem to possess a certain sagely grasp of life beyond the commercial schlep.

"We're all created by our environment when we're growing up," she says. "I don't think I was born this way, I think I was created. I've been tap dancing all my life." She pauses for a long moment.

Does she mean literally or metaphorically?

"Literally, jazz tap dancing. Metaphorically, too, I guess. I'm a terrible real tap dancer, but I'm a fantastic metaphorical tap dancer."

Sia was tapping along quite nicely at the beginning of this millennium, living in London with the usual ups and downs. Then

Sobering up killed Amy: Dad

Amy Winehouse's family are now suggesting that the troubled singer's death was actually caused by trying to get sober after years of heavy drinking, according to the Sun.

Her father, Mitch Winehouse, reportedly says it was the shock to her system of going cold turkey that did her in.

"He said doctors had told Amy to gradually reduce her intake of alcohol and to avoid bingeing at all costs. Amy told him she couldn't do that. It was all or nothing and she gave up completely," a source says.

"Mitch said the shock of giving up, after everything she had been through over a bad few years, was just too much for her to take." ● METRO

A toast to Bloody Mary

PETER ROCKWELL

Paris is a drinkers' Disneyland with a cool bar, café or brasserie on almost every corner.

I spent time there recently and worked my way to rue Daunou, to pay respects to Harry's New York Bar: A liquid landmark since 1911. Some visit because Ernest Hemingway hung out there. I made the pilgrimage to taste its Bloody Mary.

If the history of that classic cocktail has one consistency it's that it was invented at Harry's in the early 1930s. Some say it was named after a girl the original bartender knew from a joint called the Bucket of Blood Club in Chicago. Others say England's Queen Mary I was the inspiration.

You can find dozens of Bloody Mary recipes online that suggest any number of different vodkas to use as a base.

While Harry's chooses a Polish version; I like keeping things Canadian and mix mine with Iceberg Vodka (750 ml, $23.59 - $26.98) — a super smooth, full-flavoured spirit made with melted iceberg chunks harvested off the coast of Newfoundland. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS CANADA. These over-the-top sophisticated sundaes may look fancy but are easy to make. You start by making walnut praline. The praline is broken into pieces and scattered over scoops of ice cream glazed with root beer syrup. The sundae is crowned with a peak of whipped cream and candied orange peel.

Root Beet Praline Sundaes

Preparation:

1 Preheat oven to 400°F. Then scatter walnuts in single layer on sheet pan and toast in oven for 10 minutes, until aromatic and lightly browned.

2 Heat sugar in nonstick skillet over medium-high heat, stirring occasionally with wooden spoon, until sugar begins to melt and lump. Add 2 tablespoons of root beer syrup. Mix will start to foam. Stir constantly; sugar will become thinner and lumps will melt. When almost all lumps are gone, remove from heat and stir in butter and baking soda. Liquid will become foamy. Stir until foam is no longer streaky, about 10 seconds. Mix in toasted walnuts and pour mix back onto sheet pan, scraping as much of the melted sugar possible with stirring spoon. Allow to set until firm. Torque pan and sheet of caramelized nuts will pop off. Chop into small pieces.

3 To make sundaes, put scoop of ice cream in 4 dessert dishes. Drizzle remaining root beer syrup over top, and top with a generous sprinkle of caramelized walnuts. Top each with a dollop of whipped cream and a spoonful of candied orange peel. Serve.

ADAPTED FROM HOMEMADE SODA BY ANDREW SCHLOSS (2011, STOREY PUBLISHING)

Ingredients:

- ½ cup walnuts
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cup root beer syrup
- 1 tablespoon butter

- Pinch of baking soda
- 1 quart vanilla or coffee ice cream
- ½ cup whipped cream
- ¼ cup candied orange peel

► These Root Beer Praline Sundaes are sure to impress your guests.

All in or fold? MLB teams must decide

► Trade deadline weekend should reveal which teams are serious about making a run at the 2011 World Series, and which have written off season

J. MERIC/GETTY IMAGES

► The Texas Rangers saw what a big deal can do last year when they got Cliff Lee from Seattle and rode him to the World Series.

The Major League Baseball trade deadline is fast approaching, and plenty of big names have already moved.

Carlos Beltran is headed to San Francisco, bolstering the reigning world champions for another run at the title and Colby Rasmus is out of Tony La Russa's doghouse in St. Louis and batting in the Rogers Centre.

With the deadline looming Sunday, there are still a lot of big decisions to be made and big stars who could be getting changes of scenery.

The New York Yankees are in second place in the AL East, three games behind Boston, which almost assuredly means they will be active. The Yankees could be in the market for a quality starter with Phil Hughes struggling and a left-handed reliever.

“If we make moves, we feel that it's to better the club,” Yankees manager Joe Girardi said. “Will we tweak it? I don't know.

Market watch

Four impact players rumoured to be available going into Sunday's non-waiver deadline.

Ubaldo Jimenez
RHP, COLORADO

27-year-old is having an off year, but his strikeout ability is overpowering. Good fits? Yankees, Reds

Heath Bell
RHP, SAN DIEGO

All-star is maybe the most proven closer available. Good fits? Rangers, Angels, Cardinals.

Hunter Pence
RF, HOUSTON

Hitting .307 with 11 HRs, 62 RBIs and 24 2Bs, for the lowly Astros. Good fits? Braves, Phillies.

B.J. Upton
CF, TAMPA BAY

2002's second overall pick has 15 HRs and 53 RBIs, with AVG of .227. Good fits? Nationals, Tigers.

Past history has shown the Yankees have done everything they can to tweak the club to make it better.”

Other teams in baseball's upper echelon like the Red Sox and Phillies will likely be active in the trade market.

Several other teams in limbo. The Minnesota Twins are six games behind the Detroit Tigers in the AL Central. They have a history of late-season surges, but must make a decision soon if they are going to be buyers or sellers.

The Cleveland Indians are in a similar boat. The Indians trail the Tigers by just two games. They traded for outfield help Thursday. With outfielders Grady Sizemore and Shin-Soo Choo on the disabled list the Indians added Cubs outfielder Kosuke Fukudome for a pair of minor league players.

And what about the Cincinnati Reds? They're five games behind the Cardinals in the NL Central — and St. Louis just picked up right-hander Edwin Jackson, too — but some help in the rotation or the outfield could put them right back in the picture.

More big names find new NFL homes

There goes Albert Haynesworth, heading from Mike Shanahan's Redskins to Bill Belichick's Patriots — where he'll be joined by New England's other big pickup Thursday: Chad Ochocinco.

Reggie Bush? The Saints sent him to the Dolphins. And the Kevin Kolb saga ended the way pretty much everyone expected, with a trade from the Eagles to the Cardinals.

NFL clubs made a move a minute Thursday — and those big-name deals were only the beginning.

Day 3 of the compressed, post-lockout off-season also included more contract agreements and plenty of cuts, which teams were finally allowed to start announcing at 4:01 p.m. ET. Among the players getting released were Vince Young by the Titans, Nate Clements by the 49ers, and Jake Delhomme by the Browns.

In the first dramatic example of how the new labour deal's rookie salary system will affect elite players, No. 2 overall draft pick Von Miller got $21 million US guaranteed over four years from the Denver Broncos. The No. 2 pick in 2010, Detroit Lions defensive lineman Ndamukong Suh, signed a five-year deal worth $40 million guaranteed and as much as $68 million overall.

Broncos football chief John Elway tweeted, “We have agreed to terms with our 1st round pick, LB Von Miller. Can't wait to get him on the field.”

The man widely regarded as the best available player in free agency, Nnamdi Asomugha, didn't pick a team yet. But another top cornerback, Johnathan Joseph, agreed to terms with the Houston Texans, according to a person with knowledge of the deal, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the signing hadn't been announced.

Caroline, Love you honey!
Can't wait to see you! CHRIS

My MoonSaur Babe
Honey..agree, let's go to bed hand in hand NOW. Coz you need sleep..lots of it. It has been a while we both have not slept coz of me missing YOU n you missing me. Now we have found each other. haha..LOL...:) So relax n sleep well:~:) hug.
SMILEOSAUR

Green Eyes, When your intense green eyes looks at me, I know why I fell in love with you. Too bad that now you have a girlfriend and I am not one to ruin other people's relationships. You made your choice when you picked her over me and now I have made mine by avoiding you and saving myself further heartbreak. So get the message and don't talk to me unless it is work related! BROWN EYES

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Make a point of looking for the good things in life today, rather than the bad things. You may be surprised.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 Mercury at odds with Neptune warns it might be wise to think again about a project you are planning.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You may be tempted to tell someone what you really think of him or her. Hold your tongue — for now.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Your popularity seems to be soaring, but don't let it go to your head.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 You may want to start something new but there is no need to rush.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 Think before you speak today and steer clear of controversial issues.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Don't worry if you can't seem to get into the swing of things socially today because you will more than make up for it over the weekend.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 If someone makes a suggestion that goes against your principles, you must turn it down flat.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Someone in a position of authority will put you to the test. Show him or her you're up for the challenge.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Don't like the public eye? So what? It's a crime to waste your talents.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Others can test limits if they want. You must avoid going to extremes. Steer a middle course. It's safe.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. Sometimes the best way to deal with annoying people is simply to ignore them. SALLY BROMPTON
